

A conditional phrase is a condition of something happening. Conditionals talk about both real and unreal situations in the present and future tense.

A zero conditional is about the present time and describes something that is always true.

For example: If you heat ice, it melts.

No matter what it always happens - it's always true. It's a zero conditional statement.

Finish these zero conditionals using "if" or "when".

1. _____ he practices he does well.
2. _____ I need computer help I ask my brother.
3. _____ she gets up early she goes for a run.
4. I read the newspaper comics _____ I get up early.
5. _____ it rains I play in the puddles.
6. _____ it snows we go sledding on the hill.
