

A conditional phrase is a condition of something happening. Conditionals talk about both real and unreal situations in the present and future tense.

A second conditional is about the future time and describes something that is hypothetical or might happen.

For example: If I practiced, I would play better.

Finish these second conditionals by re-writing the verb in brackets in the second conditional format. The first one is done for you as an example.

1. If Zach skips school, he [be] ____ suspended.
If Zach skips school, he would be suspended.
2. The store [close] _____ if business doesn't increase.
3. I [pass] _____ my class if I studied every night after school.
4. I [buy] _____ those shoes if I had my wallet.
5. If it snows, we [leave] _____ later.
